Why Study Arabic?

Arabic is a beautiful language with a rich heritage of literature, scholarly work, and ancient culture. Students become familiar with many of the cultural patterns, social issues, historical events, artistic traditions, and elements of daily life of the people whose cultures are rooted in Arabic. Studying Arabic will not only satisfy a curiosity about the world, but knowing Arabic can give students a career edge in fields such as diplomacy, intelligence, business, engineering, international development, and academia.

Modern Standard Arabic is ideally suited for students of the Social Sciences considering work or research anywhere in the Arab world (including North Africa); students of the humanities such as History, Art, Music, Comparative Literature, Linguistics, Philosophy, and Religion; or students of Applied Sciences and Business who may be considering work or research in an Arabic speaking country. Though all students are welcome to register!

Why Study Hebrew?

Hebrew is the most common language among Jewish people around the globe, and it's one of the oldest in the world. The Hebrew Language and Literature minor allows students access to three world religions and related literatures. The very language is a natural gateway to the structure and vocabulary of related languages (including Arabic, Aramaic, Phoenician, and others).
